Season Outlook

The St. Andrews men's and women's golf programs look to build on an average fall season and plan on being very competitive in the Carolinas-Virginia Athletics Conference (CVAC) this spring.

The St. Andrews men's team was picked sixth in the 2005 CVAC Pre-Season Poll as voted upon by the leagues coaches after having an up-and-down fall season. The Knights, who finished sixth in the 2004 CVAC Tournament and fourth in the Atlantic Regional, were picked behind Coker, Barton, Pfeiffer, Belmont Abbey and Queens.

The Knights started the year off with a disappointing eighth place showing in the Anderson Invitational but bounced back with a good appearance in the Johnny Palmer Invitational. St. Andrews finished in the top-half of a very difficult field including ahead of CVAC rivals Queens, Barton, Anderson, Mount Olive and Lees-McRae.

The highlight of the fall came in late September when the Knights hosted the St. Andrews Fall Invitational at the Deercroft Golf Club. SAPC won the 12-team tournament with a 15-over par 303.

First year head coach Josh Nahm, who played his collegiate golf at St. Andrews, will guide a young but talented group of 12 gentlemen. 2004 CVAC Freshman of the Year, Alvin Yeung, looks to improve on his team low 77.0 fall stroke average while seniors Josh Boucher and Jon Hermanson look to go out with a bang. Graham Bell, Cory Fleck, John Kolls, Matt Wilson and Nathan Young all played in multiple tournaments for the Knights in the fall.

The St. Andrews women's golf team, who are picked sixth in the 2005 CVAC Pre-Season Coaches Poll, will look to build on last year's inaugural season. The Knights have already beaten last year's low one-day team total by 85 strokes this fall.

The Knights return two players in Andrea Johnston and Kristen Bowling. Johnson made last years CVAC All-Conference Second Team. Nahm added four new players including Heather Pothier, Tara Laird, Sally McDaniel and Cara Daily. Pothier holds SAPC's individual low tournament round with a 77.

Both teams will play in five regular season tournaments including hosting the St. Andrews Spring Invitation March 21-22 at the Woodlake Country Club in Pinehurst, NC. The Knights will compete for the CVAC Conference Title in Hartsville, SC (hosted by Coker) on April 17-19. The 2005 Atlantic Super Regional will be hosted by Columbus State on May 2-4.
